

Holiday Headquarters is at Harden & Co.

Yes we are now ready with a fine display and would like very much to have a Holiday Opening, but the fact is we have no room left to accommodate large numbers at one time. So we extend a cordial invitation to all to come in and look through at your convenience.

We are especially strong this season in Leather Goods. We show 30 or more styles of Leather Chairs and Rockers, prices $36. down to the cheapest. Also Leather Couches of a guaranteed quality. Not the cheap No. 2 leather that is being put out at a low price and would be dear at any price.

We have just received a fine line of Bed Davenport in Chase Leather, Velour, etc., prices right. Dining Tables, all styles and prices from $4.50 to $22.00, and if you will come and look through and do not say it is the finest display ever brought to Logan, then we will take a back seat.

Respectfully,

Rev. Father M. J. Rossa Talks on Unhappy Marriages.

"Matrimony," and "the essentials for happy marriages," have been the subjects of several sermons by Rev. Father M. J. Rossa, one of the priests of the St. Vincent, now conducting a mission at the Holy Name church during this week.

Young men are advised to search for something besides good looks when choosing a wife, and to try to see the girl in the kitchen instead of the parlor once in awhile, while the young ladies are told that if they would take the same amount of trouble in selecting husbands that they do in selecting dresses they would live happier lives after marriage.

Long engagements were deprecated, Father Rossa saying that the deliberation recommended by the church in these matters did not mean 10-year engagements, with one visit a day during the week and two on Sunday.

Courting received considerable attention at the hands of the speaker, who advised the girls to keep sufficient light burning to redeem the parlor from darkness, to leave the door open and not to attempt to make pieces of furniture intended for one hold two.

Lunatic or imbecile asylums were recommended as the proper destination for those youngsters who, out for a holiday, suddenly make up their minds to return home.

Referring to the unhappy marriage of today, he said many of the men aspiring to be the head of households are not fit to be the head of a well-organized chicken coop, while too many of the girls who enter matrimony are unable to boil water without burning it.

The thoughtless manner in which the American youth of today take upon themselves the most serious of relations was severely arraigned, and the speaker appealed to his hearers to get away from such methods and to act rationally.

Banker's Wife Sent to the Pen.

Coshocton, Ohio, November 30.—Mrs. Mary Lingafelter, of Newark, convicted of aiding her son, already in prison, in committing forgery was sentenced this afternoon by Judge Campbell, of the Common Pleas Court, to serve three years at hard labor in the State Penitentiary. The Court, had just overruled a motion of her counsel for a new trial.

With her in Court, besides her husband, were half a dozen women who have clung to her from the day she first became involved in the prosecution. There were few others present.

The verdict of guilty was opposed by the defense mainly on the ground that the statutes of Ohio do not make an accessory after the fact in cases of forgery indictable. On this issue the case is to be carried to the State Supreme Court.

Judge Campbell, in a halting way, approached what he declared was the hardest duty of his life. It was the greatest effort that he brought himself to call Mrs. Lingafelter before him. As she advanced, he asked in a low tone if she had anything to say why sentence should not be passed. At this the woman, leaning on the chair of one of her attorneys, in a voice vibrant with feeling, yet in tones clear and defiant, said to the Court:

"I never aided or committed a forgery in my life; I am not guilty, so help me God!"

She returned to her seat and sat composedly. Nor did she shed a tear. The Court was deeply affected and tears stole down his cheek as he referred to the sentence he had previously imposed on her husband.

"It is not the length of time in the penitentiary, but the fact of the conviction that is the punishment," he remarked, as he pronounced sentence.

Her attorneys pleaded that she be allowed her liberty under the present bond until Circuit Court could suspend sentence pending the appeal. This was refused and she was given into the custody of the Sheriff, who placed her in jail here. Her appeal bond was fixed at $2,000. Her attorneys plan to secure her release by Monday.

The conviction of Mrs. Lingafelter closes a long legal battle which has for its denouement prison stripes the father, mother and son. Till the financial crash they had held prominent places in Newark social and business circles and their standing enabled them to fight off till the last minute retribution for their acts. After the joint failure of the Newark Savings Bank and the Homestead Building Association in 1904, both father and son were convicted, but the upper Courts reversed the finding.

The son, Robert J. Lingafelter, was tried a second time and convicted in February, 1906. He was denied rehearing and sent to the Mansfield Reformatory for a term of seven years.

The father, James F. Lingafelter, was convicted in October of this year and the upper Court sustained the verdict.

Mrs. Lingafelter, whose forgeries and false entries in the bank's accounts were said to have been made to shield her son, was granted a change of venue to Coshocton, where she was found guilty as charged, November 10, 1906.
